If the elites bring drugs to Saudi Arabia with the claim from the top scholars saying “it is not a big deal to do drugs”, that will devastate the Middle East with the youth abusing LSD for instance and ruining their brains since the scholars claim it’s not a big deal and there will be drugs everywhere, it’s not alcohol, so what is the big deal for the youth to do LSD? I get a good sense the elites will do something sick like this in the hopes that these drugs such as LSD hit Syria that is devasted from the war.

If this gets out of hand where kids are raised to be tolerant of both genders viewed as “genderless”, you for instance can never say “women are more emotional than men”. This means we humans cannot be identified. Why marry a woman if you are a man? Why not a man? You just said the genders are the same. If you cannot understand a woman and the differences between a woman to a man, how can you ever stay married to a woman? Women want a man; men want a woman, correct? The youth will grow up confused in what they even like because they will be taught to like both male and female activities such as painting your nails. If they are confused, how will they lead a household or a work environment? They have to worry about themselves all of the time because they don’t function properly they aren’t fully there yet in their head. No one can be “all” as a choice, this isn’t what life intended for. What may seem innocent where boys in schools put on nail polish during class and then take it off when they get home, what will happen is not that they will quit it years later, it will instead grow into something far bigger because they don’t have fathers and mothers to teach them what they can and cannot do. They will be out in the public all on their own to go explore new ideas for them to be more different from men. When I first heard a story like this, I thought it was innocent, now I think the opposite. Remember that this is a brand-new concept of boys putting on nail polish, we have yet to see the future of it of what it will do to society. Yes, it may be a phase but given where people want to be something new as their own generation separate from all the other generations previous, we can only fear what is to come.

All these people who want peace in the world as a first goal and want protests to be legal everywhere, we can't do that in today’s earth. The people who are protesting in Syria for instance have such terrible ideas that will cause the country to collapse with the youth who are 18 and below when they grow up. Meaning all these people who want peace, they don’t know what peace actually means in today’s world. Peace has to be protected at all costs such as shutting down a protest that America purposely funds to crush a country, yet the people who claim to always want peace just to overlook this key detail entirely because if they were upright in what they do, they would have to protest in America for this action America is committing overseas.

Because most people are so miserable in society, they will “fight” (argue way too much) with their parents with their new ideas they learned through social media or colleges. All this will do is ruin families everywhere who want their young adult son or daughter to be Christian conservative or just conservative. This means families will be destroyed because the father and the son or daughter are so opposite, one is far left, one is far right. The same will happen to religion worldwide! What the youth will do, they will stay “Muslim” however, they will put in so many far leftist’s ideas, it’s no longer Islam that they follow.

When you post TikTok videos for the youth in hopes that you will go as viral possible when you’re about 30 years old, when you are trying to pass these videos off as “wisdom”, why to “convert”, how “islam” could better your life, what “islam” means to you, you could be completely sure of “islam” by watching this video. What you are actually doing where your very short videos use no reason at all, you cause people to go to any religious center be it a Church or Mosque to lie claiming you helped guide them to religion from you to also share your very short videos there, where they are laughing at you like you could not possibly imagine. Yes, there are so many people who post videos like these on TikTok, oh I have seen them from many different religious people. It gets worse; the youth will become dumber from watching these videos all day long.

The reason why they won’t teach gender studies in the schools is because parents don’t trust the government with it, the protesting parents want the youth to be taught in religious centers and at home. Both males and females will have to learn the hard way boundaries for each gender. Yes, I do support gender studies in schools.

If Iranians believe the Iranian conflict with Saudi Arabia is “politics”, Iran will collapse because the youth will not want wars at all. They will protest again and again for a new regime. Sometimes the truth is what people don’t want to hear no matter how much evidence one can provide.

The youth I’ve observed don’t know where their values are. They respond with “I dunno” to many things or just do not care. They want to make sure you have the right to be a horrible person provided you are seeking help which doesn’t work. What makes this so scary too is they all have so many years of education at a bachelors. The ones that know what goes on which is the minority, they won’t speak out against it. They are too busy with politicians they don’t like. They don’t want to insult their friends.

They are teaching the youth that crying is showing you are in touch with your emotions. Crying will be seen as the norm for men to post on the internet. So real problems will be overlooked of people crying losing loved ones in wars in Yemen.

Plenty of the youth's women don't get mad if they are called a "stupid woman" by a smart man. Yet they get deeply offended at racism? If you insult someone's weight, they will be so offended. Yet they don't care about misogyny which I have just showed. What?!

The youth don't care if they are right or wrong. They figure if they are wrong, they can learn.... but they never do. More so they don't trust you when you tell them they are right.

The youth want to believe everything is all good in society so that they overlook reality.

The youth seem to value everyone's opinions but plenty of them cannot tell which opinions are bad. They want to be kind to everyone in society, but that's not possible. They don't ever want to be offended meaning they cannot take criticism.

One thing I noticed about the youth is that they answer every question as open ended. Rarely will give they give you a straight answer with anything. For example, when I asked someone my age if literature can be trashing someone, he answered by saying "it's on the fence". They are very pc where they don't want to offend anyone. This is one way of how religion will be distorted in the future.

I have a question for the youth- what would indicate that being mentally ill makes you "special" in some way? What do you gain from being told your testimony isn't valid?

The youth have focusing issues, too much energy.

The youth will be raised with no values at all. Everything they get will be found on the internet. There won't be elders who can tell of why to respect the generations and contributions they made to society because now society is pretty much the opposite of 1970 as example.

The youth are lacking in reading scores. This means they will be incapable of doing daily tasks.

The youth want to be loved and praised through the internet. They get very upset when they get hate mail on the internet....as if either would matter. They won't be able to hold it together being told that they are not loved. They want to be known in a certain way, but they can't.

The youth want to believe they don’t hurt or offend anyone. Once they take stands which they do they ultimately do just that. They cannot recognize that they do that.

Teaching critical race theory will make the youth uneducated as an example. I am sure the American conservatives will come up with something of their own to counteract it wasting more students time teaching “tolerance”!

All the youth are doing to see is their smartphone, they won’t see reality. They won’t know what life is really like that life is not a dream, but they will envision life as such.

Anxiety and stress will just go higher with the youth because they feel they have to accomplish everything in life, to do that they must spend over 3 hours on their smart phones every day.

The youth think going to a therapist makes them a better version of themselves, not sure how that is so.

The youth will want things faster. They will always expect your full attention.

Since the next generation wants endless attention, this is proof that in a country with so much wealth there will always be work to be done. Muhammad spoke of this, he said to say a kind word. You have to say a lot of kind words to the youth and win them over. Believe me this is a new concept and it’s a lot of work.

The youth will not respect their parents or elders because the youth will believe that their parents and elders caused this mess we live in today. It is that simple.

Because America doesn’t teach religion in schools, the youth are not taught that lying is not acceptable. So, the youth could lie about something, someone gets mad at their lies and calls them out for it and the schoolteachers will never tell the student to stop lying…………. this might be indoctrination for a school to deny laws of life. This isn’t a preference like a football team, this has to do with the proper way to run a country.

A 44% increase in mental health disorders amongst the youth from 2009 to 2019.

Remember that once the youth move out of their parents’ house, they can be anyone they want to be.

The youth expect to be respected by society or else they protest that their voices must be heard.

The youth cannot tell when a situation is serious.

The youth are all over the place when they talk.

The youth watch people's lives, they don't even live life anymore.

The youth are against anything viewed as "phobic" or "anti", anything viewed as discriminatory.

The youth are scoring at all-time lows, but they know everything about their mental health issues and the field and their problems which takes years to study to understand. They also know a lot about politics too for some reason but nothing else, what? I can't help but think what a terrible life to live.

Many of the youth don't know how to do things and they can't be taught. They will work dead end jobs their whole life and become activists protesting for higher wages.

At schools the word "nigga" is used a good amount by any race. I don't support that word for us white people to say if you know me well enough.

The schools are not overwhelming the students with assemblies for anti-bullying and anti-drug. That seems to be the thing the schools look for the most bullying and anti-drug. That seems to be the thing the schools look for bullying the most, but we know in the future there will be many assemblies.

All these choices complicate things for the youth. They all want everything they see; they want everything now it is stressing them out.

The youth say they want to be themselves who they are, but for a portion of them, they idolize James Charles. What does James Charles have to offer someone?

The number one career the youth want in the U.S. is social media influencer. When I was 13 on the internet, I don't think anyone used YouTube from local schools even in 2009 they only watched a few videos. I feel old. I don't feel I can relate to them at all, the videos I watched had nothing in common meaning they were the opposite of what is viewed today.

The youth like very much what they call "facts" when someone they look up to is talking and they believe the person they are looking up to makes a talking point that stands out.

The youth judge highly based on how people dress.

The youth will say "this conversation is circular" to get out of something.

The youth claim mental illnesses and are talking about it all day to get attention on TikTok. I don't understand this at all.

Many of the youth monitor every word you say waiting to insult you. These youth act as if it is some form of advice.

If you ignore the youth when they tease you continually, they will want attention. They will stop and then they will go right back to teasing you.

The youth when they say something they regret, they say "I am just joking."

The youth want you to be very technical when it comes to words when they are somewhat technical with words.

The youth expect everyone around them to always be always available for their entertainment.

The youth get outraged if you raise your voice. They sing loudly. Their singing is either terrible or bad.

The youth will say you are fake if you don't have their back with something. The youth will only have your back if they think it will make their life better for them.

The youth expect you to be their friend if they want to be your friend.

The youth give you flack for what you eat. I don't understand this at all.

The youth have no standards for themselves.

As you enter or exit a door, they will ask you something as quick as they can.

The youth feel they need to say every opinion on their mind whenever they talk to you.

The youth insult you and then say "I am * with you" often.

The youth believe that if you don't follow what they do yourself, then you are not being "fair."

When the youth ask for things from you, they ask so quick.

Many of the youth require attention most of the time.

When the youth doesn't want you to talk, they tell you to "shut up."

The youth can talk all day long if they want to.

The youth give direction after direction to you at random when they have no thought at all with the directions they are giving.

At times, the youth will ask a question for something they just heard you tell someone else.

The youth interrupt most of the time.

The youth involve themselves with many conversations that doesn’t involve them.

The youth are the highest critics ever of whatever they buy.

The youth have ruined slang.

The youth cannot budget. Though they were not the ones who started that.

The youth for some reason keeps seeking wisdom that’s why many are copying what Andrew Tate puts out.

The youth will come up with some off belief to why to give them something if you don’t give it to them.

The youth believe they must come first.

The youth mistake professionalism with their way of how they want to do something where it is done incorrectly.

If the youth have a beginners understanding of a concept like socialism, the youth believe they have a PhD’s understanding of socialism.

The youth want to be their own boss. When prices went up in America, they wanted to work less for a company since they don’t believe they would become rich for a company when costs are high.
